Surrender The Sun: A Post Apocalyptic Dystopian Thriller

Synopsis

It's happened once before, and it will happen again. In the year 2030 the Maunder Minimum, a period of solar inactivity, will cause a mini-ice age like it did between the years 1645 and 1710.

When it does, Bishop will have to save her not only from the effects of severe weather but also from man himself. Maeve Tildon and her son Ben live alone in the rural town of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Since her husband died in the war, she's barely kept her head above water, and when the first freeze strikes in the fall, she's completely unprepared for what lies ahead. Only a war-torn man, one who prefers the solitude of the Kootenai National Forest, can rescue her and her son. From the best selling author of the Graham's Resolution series, Shaw brings you Surrender the Sun.

Customer Reviews

The Kootenai National Forest has become a place to hide from the stress of the world for many ex-military who have lost their ability to cope with the everyday pressures and tensions of life. The forest is elevated above the beautiful city of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Living in tents, lean-tos, caves, what better way to get away from an adverse and demanding society one can no longer tolerate. A man known as Bishop has cast the world aside to live his life on his own terms. Bishop's existence is about to change in a way he never thought possible. This is the story of a grieving widow and her son who, through the perils of war, have lost a husband and father. Their home, being located within the edge of the forest, is isolated with their closest neighbour half a mile away leaving them vulnerable. On this cold Autumn day Maeve and Ben Tillman awaken to find their home unusually frigid for the month of October. While preparing to start their day Maeve and Ben watch the weather report predicting a massive snow storm that is headed their way. Not really believing a storm of that magnitude could hit them before winter even begins Maeve continues with her daily routine of driving Ben to school and herself to work. She is far from being prepared for what is about to happen. While not paying proper attention to the icy roads Maeve barely misses hitting a man on horseback. A man her son calls the Hermit. Getting out of her vehicle to see if the man and his horse are injured she finds them just inside the forest. Not knowing this man with piercing blue eyes was a friend of her late husband's, but relieved to find horse and rider uninjured, after a brief conversation Maeve continues on her way with an admonishment from the strange man to be cautious on the slick roads.
