Just when you think you know how the next book in "The Legend of Zero" series will go, Sara King amazingly weaves her magic to another direction you didn't anticipate. :-) This time we find our hero of this series, instead of battling aliens in space for Congress, Commander Zero, aka Joe Dobbs is now Earth bound. On a planet that has rejected him, by a Congress that has now betrayed him, fighting the Congressional planted hungry kreenit, and still dealing with the prophecy that has yet to be fulfilled. His devastated birthplace is forced back by Congress into the Stone Ages, Joe is now in a dog eat dog environment where only the strongest will survive. With no trained Congie ground crews to assist him, Joe is on his own with only his faithful Jane by his side. Earth we discover was not, accepting the takeover of their planet nor forced recruitment of their children quietly. Secretly they were developing their own kind of genetic weapons to fight back, until Congress discovers what they have been up to. Earth is quickly condemned in Congressional proportions; its technological centers, universities and bases destroyed, and then their cities are salted with hungry kreenit. A quarter billion human Congies are thrown back on a planet that hates them, where they may be to be the only humans to survive the devastation to serve Earth's penance for a Sacred Turn. Miss King once again does not disappoint with her creating a new wonderful mind blowing cast of characters, as well as reuniting those from Joe's past. It is so hard not to give out spoilers here, as I do not want to ruin the unveiling of the multiple twists and turns of this book.

Sara King has such a gift for making her characters just so darn lovable. This is the third in the Zero series, and now Joe Dobbs is finally getting his wish and returning to Earth after a very long time. Of course it's not the Earth he left seventy-some turns ago (like a year), and Joe is nothing like the 14 year old boy Earth boy he was when he was 'drafted' into the Congressional army of worlds to fight their battles. Now Joe is a hero and bigger than life, but he must go back to Earth along with all other humans because scientists on Earth have spliced the DNA of psychics to create soldiers who can kill using only their minds. Finding himself back on Earth is shocking for Joe. While he's busy killing the tyrannosaurus rex-type aliens that have been set loose on Earth as punishment because of the traitorous scientists, Joe gets spit on by the local humans gone mad as all of their technology gets shut off. In this mad-max scenario, Joe runs into the 'new people', the enhanced humans who are as innocent as babes, but with the power to flatten mountains with only a thought. Hardened by his long years of military service, Joe feels as if he's tainted and that these 'new people' deserve better, although Joe knows that the desperate and murderous human race will kill anything that looks like a good(yes, humans are reduced to cannibalism)so he sticks with the group to protect them.Sara King's characters are so real and so flawed that they actually transcend what it means to be human, and most of them are aliens. Unlike the previous two Zero books in the series, this book deals only with humans and a man-eating dinosaurs, so King as a chance to really give us some insight into just exactly who and what humanity really is down deep.

Joe is basically manipulated, used, and sabotaged by everyone he meets. He doesn't care. One nice word or a paragraph later, he's friends with people who are doing their best to turn him into something he isn't. In the beginning of the series, he's kidnapped, and forcibly drafted. The next book he seems to like it. The author has to be going for the universe's most extreme version of repeated Stockholm Syndrome. Throughout the series Joe is repeatedly put into situations with people who hate him and do their best to either kill him or manipulate him, and all he does is repeatedly forget all of it and be all buddy-buddy with them. I cannot put into words how much I hate the character of Dobbs. While the author puts Dobbs on a pedestal for leadership, he is one of the worst examples of leadership I have seen in my life. I hate his character more and more in each book.The second protagonist I disliked even more. Twelve-A's a hypocrite of the highest level. To those who would hurt him, he refuses any sort of violence. Dobbs, who is helping him, he repeatedly punishes with physical pain any time they disagree. He threatens Dobbs with repeated brainwashing and is still supposed to be the good guy. He manipulates Dobbs, abuses him, and treats him worse than I treat rats infesting my house. Twelve-A settles disagreements with Dobbs by either using his abilities to cause Dobbs pain, or by putting Dobbs to sleep. And Dobbs keeps coming back for more from his 'friend' Twelve-A. Twelve-A continuously defends attempted murders, attempted rapists, thieves, et cetera. He constantly handicaps their best chance of survival through his idiocy. The guy is a waste of air. And Dobbs constantly forgives him for all of it and blames himself. Over and over and over.
