Two Tall Tails, two short stories from Sofie Kelly/Sofie Ryan, incorporates each of her series. The Cat Burglar is a Magical Cats story with Owen and Hercules and their human, Kathleen, and the question of missing merchandise from the artist co-op. Kathleen is the town librarian and armature sleuth. She and the cats investigate the disappearing merchandise to find the culprit. No More Pussyfooting Around is a Second Chance Cat story with Elvis the cat who has adopted Sarah and her shop that rescues and re-purposes items giving them a second chance to be useful. Elvis has adopted Sarah and is often in the middle of every thing happening in and around his human. An elderly neighbour has a nephew who has arrived for a visit and whilst he was visiting, she has fallen and ends up in hospital. The nephew is mean and nasty and has become the neighbourhood bully. Things begin disappearing and questions are being asked with the nephew causing more questions than answers. Elvis doesn't like the man and Sarah has her suspicions.

This was an interesting combination of two different story lines from two different series. It threw me for a minute to realize that . The two stories are cute and an easy read. I enjoyed the way the plot line developed. I hope the author will continue writing books for each of the series.

I like all three cats. They are smart and they like to do things when they are ready. Not when you want them to. They as always say a cat picks you not the other way around.

A great cozy read. Enjoyed how the cats played right into the story line. With just a small amount of imagination you can connect the dots to see the solution.

I loved both stories , they were so good !! I fell in love with all three kitties !! So smart they were !! Can't wait for more Magical Cats to come my way !!
