Customer Reviews

Let me start this by saying that I'm not the typical audience for this kind of book. I'm really not into spiritual things or secret societies or whatever other tag you want to pin into this... I read this book so I could make fun of it but now that I've finished it I think the joke is on me. To understand why I'm giving Illuminatism 5 stars you have to know my full story so bear with me. Randomly last year (after a few glasses of wine, full disclosure) I googled for "official Illuminati website" to see what would pop up. Not surprisingly there are 100s of websites claiming to be the Illuminati but unlike all the others that looked like bygone Geocities junk, when I clicked the one at the top I was surprised to discover a cleanly designed page claiming to represent the "real" Illuminati. Weird. So I dug deeper. The more I dug the further I fell into this Illuminatism rabbit hole that you're about to discover. You can look it up for yourself so I'll skip the details but remember that was last year. I really didn't know what to think of it but it was weirdly authoritative. I couldn't stop digging. I think part of me kept checking their websites and social media (yes Illuminati is on Twitter, who knew) in the hopes that they'd say something glaringly obvious that'd point them out as a bunch of online trolls and prove my skepticism correct. After a while of inactivity, Illuminatism posted a TV commercial on Youtube. It got hundreds of thousands of views and hundreds of comments in a week. ONE WEEK. In the video, they mention something called Illuminatism without explaining what it is. So, randomly, again, I searched Google and I found this book last week. This is where it gets weird.

The book was well written but not credible. It states that the Illuminati have been guiding people throughout human history. Evidence? None and the group wasn't even formed until 1776 by Adam Weishaupt in Bavaria. They try to defend a viewpoint that they are above criticism and deserve the ability to blackmail world leaders by disclosing personal information. So what is the requirement to be one of these self appointed guardians? Their website states that the best candidates are those who have accumulated $1 million or more, land holdings etc. Now considering that the rich are known to: give less money to charity than the poor and that corporate executives have the same personality traits as sociopaths we see that this is just a group of mega-rich individuals who know nothing about ethics and world governance but get their kicks feeding their egos by enforcing their whims over companies and governments that affect billions of people. Examples of their actions would be: World Bank demanding that people impoverish themselves by privatizing water, so much to the extent that people aren't even allowed to collect rain water, black ops and false flag ops by the American CIA the start wars by planting fake terrorists, and the passage of aspartame and Roundup-ready pesticide as safe by the FDA when these are rejected in Europe. What is the light? It isn't specifically stated but within occult circles the light refers to the Luciferian god of the Yazidi, a religion that encourages possession by demons and promotes pagan magical blood ritual practices (see the movie Eyes Wide Shut). We see this promoted all over the music industry with music videos promoting magical rituals or referring to multiple personality induction (known as MK Ultra, also see the movie the Manchurian Candidate).
