Christianity has been dealt a favor by publishing this near-exhaustive study aid. The word "paramony" is an invented conjunction of the words "parallel" and "harmony" to imply that the book demonstrates the supposed "parallel harmony" that exists between The Urantia Book (TUB) and the Holy Bible. However, anybody who utilizes this remarkable resource to the full extent of its intended use will soon find out that quite the opposite is true. To be sure, many "parallels" exist between the two, simply because TUB shamelessly plagiarizes literally thousands of biblical verses (hence, the thickness of the Paramony, which is not much more than a computerized printout that lists the locations of the parallels in a line-by-line format). However, in the vast majority of cases, the parallels are not in the least bit harmonious. Rather, the Paramony demonstrates the flagrant and intentional discord between what is written in Scripture and what the alleged celestial authors of TUB have ordained as divine correction. Most of the lifted biblical passages have either been revised or taken out of context to suit the divine revelators' version of the truth. The problem with assuming divine authority on the part of the "celestials" is that they are prone to much human error and hypocrisy. Consider the following dogmatic statement inculcated by a "Melchizedek of Nebadon" during a rather insidious treatment of Hebrew theology: "The concept of judgment in the hereafter for the sins of one's life in the flesh on earth was carried over into Hebrew theology from Egypt. The word judgment appears only once in the entire Book of Hebrew Psalms, and that particular psalm was written by an Egyptian." (TUB, p.
