"All energy is good because there's only one source for it. And what is that? The Light of the Creator, of course. There are no other batteries in this world. But the manner in which we receive the Light will determine if that energy will manifest itself as a short circuit or as a lasting current of fulfillment." - From the book
There was a time when the ability to study the Kabbalah was reserved only for 40-year old men. Thankfully, Kabbalists such as Karen Berg-co-founder of the Kabbalah Centre-are bringing this ancient Hebrew wisdom to the mainstream, allowing women and people of all ages to benefit. There are three types of "Kabbalah". The original Kabbalah-and that which the Kabbalah Centre teaches-is an ancient Hebrew esoteric system. At some point, Christians began tailoring the teachings to their beliefs, which is known as Cabala. Finally, ceremonial magicians and some Tarot readers use an occultic version of this system-Qabalah-concentrating mostly on the Tree of Life. The Tree of Life is a consistent part of all three systems, and while Berg doesn't mention the Tree directly, she does address the left, right and middle columns in her book God

Wears Lipstick. According to Kabbalah, the right column is the Desire to Share and is characterized by giving, strength, and the energy of fulfillment. This is the masculine part of the Tree called Zeir Anpin. The left column is the realm of feminine energy and the Desire to Receive. That is, there is a natural motivation to accomplish things and get things in life. This is known as Malchut, which means recipient or vessel.
