Synopsis

Calling All You Intuitive Writers out there! Does the idea of having to plan your romance novel in advance horrify you, even though you are afraid of getting lost or never finishing a new story? Well here is the secret. When you are planning to write a new story, all you need to focus on are the characters, and how they are going to change during the course of the romance as a result of the relationship. That is what will make your story both unique and compelling. Advanced story craft techniques are very handy at the editing and revision stage when you shape your story for the reader – but not here! Instead, we use the power of character arc and emotional conflict to create a simple but effective emotional story map for your romance novel. As you write your romance, your characters will come to life on the page, and reveal their true personalities through what they say and do. But first you have to get those characters onto the page and interacting with one another – fast! This is the six-step writing process professional romance authors use to develop their novels – and stay motivated and excited by their story. Now you can do the same. And keep your pants on! Find out how to outline your romance novel when you don't know a thing about story structure and the whole idea of pre-planning your story freezes you. And enjoy doing it!

Customer Reviews

I have to admit that as the headline states, I am a pantsier. I've tried so many methods to outline my writing and utterly failed at every single one. I do so much better just writing, honestly. So, I'm going to say right off the bat this book is right up my alley based on the title alone. I knew going into the reading that I wouldn't find much fault in her methods. Honestly, I still haven't. My issues with the book have nothing to do with the process or even the writing. Nina is knowledgeable on how to get your idea and your characters onto the paper without stressing yourself out over every detail in the plot. I've spent this morning, after reading most of it last night, putting her process into play. So far, I've learned a lot about my characters and why they start out feeling as they do. The two sentences of my starter idea have expanded to the point I'm ready to start writing. My hand needs a break from all the pre-writing I did this morning, but I'm ready to start writing. Please don't let the words pre-writing scare you. It's all free writing with your characters talking to you and discovering what makes their story worth telling. I didn't know much about my hero, but now I know enough about him to see he's going to be interesting and not just a handsome face for the heroine to fall in love with. I'm looking forward to discovering their story. By now you're probably saying something like "It sounds like you really enjoyed the book and found it useful. So, why the four stars instead of five?" Since I haven't actually sat down to write the idea in its entirety, I don't feel I can give it five stars until I've done so.
